FAIRS; AND BILL TRAPMANN, ENERGY INFORMATION ADMINISTRATION, OFFICE OF NATURAL GAS Mr. Smith. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, very much. I do have a formal written statement that I would offer for the record. The Chairman. We will include that statement, and all of the written statements of witnesses in the record. Mr. Smith. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The statement I have submitted for the record covers topics that cross virtually the entire Department of Energy. Some go well beyond my area of responsibility in fossil energy, therefore I have with me today several staff members from other organizations within the Department who will assist me in answering some of your more detailed questions. Mr. Chairman, the Department of Energy takes technology transfer very seriously, both as it applies domestically and as it positions our domestic firms to compete more vigorously overseas. Globally, our aggressive policies of industrial partnering and technology transfer have well-positioned U. S. firms to compete in the world marketplace. We are still the leaders in technology for producing clean power from coal and exploring and producing oil and natural gas and converting the power of the wind and sun into usable energy, and in producing energy efficient machines and appliances. This technological leadership is especially important, recognizing that in the first half of this century the market for new energy technologies just in the worlds developing and transitioned economies could approach 25 trillion. In your letter of invitation, Mr. Chairman, you asked that we address several specific elements of international technology transfer. First, you referenced the 1999 report by the Presidents Committee on Advisors on Science and Technology PCAST that...
