Not illustrated. 1884 Excerpt: .thut I cordially agree with the view expressed by the Committee of the House of Commons, that it is not desirable to throw additional burdens of taxation on the people of this country in connection with railway extension. Gentlemen, I thank you sincerely for this address. I esteem it highly as a token of approval on the part of men most competent to form an opinion on the financial and economical policy which we have pursued. (Hear) hear.) THE UNIVERSITY CONVOCATION. Lord Eipon then left the Secretariat for the University Hall, where a Convocation of the University of Bombay was held for the purpose of conferring the degree of Doctor of Laws on His Excellency. He met with an enthusiastic reception by the large crowds of people who had assembled on all sides outside the building. At the entrance were stationed a number of graduates and students belonging, for the most part, to the Elphinstone College, who had marched down from the Money School with banners bearing various mottoes, and escorted by the band of the St. Mary s Institution. The inscriptions displayed on the banners were such as Gladstone s precious gift, Free Press Liberty and Equality, Vox populi vox dei; Canning, Bentinck, Mayo, Ripon; Irresistible political evolution; Triumph of reason over prejudice; and India for India s sake. The students greeted his lordship, as he went past, with deafening cheers. At first a E recession of the fellows of the University, headed y the...
