Not illustrated. 1890 Excerpt: .buoyancy of the thread which had been exuded being insufficient to overcome the weight of the animal, instead of rising into the air, the creature returned to the post or struck upon the adjoining rail. In these and similar movements I was able to detect distinctly the vaulting action of the spider, and the eye, being thus familiarized with the movement, was less liable to be deceived in the more difficult observation of the quick spring at the time of the aerial flight. The posts and parts of railings adjoining were covered with threads adhering to the wood and streaming out into the air. These were the result in part of the feints at flight just referred to, but were , partly owing to another cause. The spiders, previous to flight or vaulting, attached themselves to the post in the manner common to most of their order. The apex of the abdomen was thrust down upon the surface, and the liquid silk at the same time exuded from the spinnerets was thus caused to adhere thereto. As the creature moved away the thread was run out into line, and gave the spider a firm attachment. It is a question whether this anchorage is always made previous to flight, and whether the thread is cut immediately before the ascent. The observations made all pointed to an affirmative answer, but the matter was not positively settled. The attempt was made to follow some of the aeronauts beyond the...
